Extracts.

(From the "Daily Telegraph.")

We English are in the habit of thinking that we know something about what is good and what is bad. We have a certain set of rules and are guided by the Church. We have no more attractive pastime than a competition for the cup, while the breeze is in our hair and the sun is on our backs. That all such contests are popular is not surprising. It is easy to appreciate the sports which make the air a stirring gale, and which it is seen in the long swift strides round Tatton-park corner; or the measured pull of Morley, or the dash and skill displayed in the trials and games, the steaming following hard in the rear; or the hunting round the Nant Light with canary-yellow hounds a guide to the chase. From the earliest to the last excitement of the close can be watched the enthusiasm, though great, of the spectators, and the desire to be present to share. But a new excitement now is finally brought to our notice. What is to be thought of a race 10,000 miles away? Come to China, though not a long run, is generally considered sufficient for a year's vacation. Come to Hongkong, though not a long run, is a hard day's work at the best. Mightier contests, involving weightier losses, are seen now-a-days. These who may, like us, be compelled to submit to the pain of gallantry, will, and endurance to the pain while hundred's of us go down to the sea. The 1,300 men, part of a GOWDON, can be seen from the pier, with a wading of her smiles, and to whom an ocean race is only one short episode in a life of battle, hardly a moment's respite.
